BACK POCKET DUO is a collaboration between pianist Annie Jeng and percussionist Colin McCall which is committed to delivering engaging and approachable performances in comfortable, intimate environments. As a performing ensemble, the duo breaks down the audience-performer wall by encouraging open dialogue and audience participation. They believe that concert spaces should be inviting and engaging, and they make every effort to transform traditional concert spaces while also seeking out unique venues. They also pull from a diverse repertoire and have recently collaborated with artists such as Yarn/Wire and composers Ivan Treviño and Jung Yoon Wie. To this end, they feel that new music from thoughtful, genuine composers is the most important tool for developing fresh ideas and maintaining relevance within the global community of music. Even further, they want to develop a new sense of connection between listeners and contemporary music. Their upcoming season will be centered around The Empathy Project, a multimedia and interdisciplinary performance of new works with the goal of fostering empathy in their audiences and beyond.
