PROGRAM NOTES

Amid the Noise

Jason Treuting

*"Go placidly amid the noise and haste, and remember what peace there may be in silence."
—Max Ehrmann's 'Desiderata'*

This work is a patient study of musical space, using a few meaningful quotes for material and structure. Performing most of the music in Amid the Noise does not require great physical virtuosity. In fact, the process of preparing these pieces is as important as the end result: in the best case, it affects the performer's aesthetic attitude. The performer must believe in the process, or at least be open to it.

Sō Percussion is headquartered in Brooklyn, New York. In New York City, one rarely gets an uninterrupted moment of peace—usually a few minutes at best. It is essential to grab that moment so that the city doesn't overwhelm you.

Jason is interested in quiet, restful, meditative modes: a pause in front of a giant painting by Marc Rothko, a Shinto temple in Kyoto, an extended performance of John Cage's Silent Piece (which may or may not last 4'33".)

The pieces in Amid the Noise are each made up of a few layers of the following: melody, harmony, drone, noise, and rhythm. In each of them, some elements are prescribed, but many are left open for the performer to explore.

The musical score provides instructions to how to arrange these elements, as well as suggestions and guidelines to help the performer inhabit his or her space within the music.
—Adam Sliwinski, Sō Percussion
